Hadicurari Fisherman's Day celebration another huge success!

First place winners Gabriela for Open boat and overall

First place winners Zenia for traditional boat and hand fishing method

The Hadicurari Fisherman's Association of Aruba marked another historic fishing tournament with record catches in both quality and quantity. The beachfront before their center, between the Marriott Surf Club and MooMba Beach Bar, was packed with celebrants enjoying the food and fun, and also taking advantage of the opportunity to purchase fresh caught fish at bargain rates.

Over 400 kg of fish were caught on Sunday, June 26 by the competing boats. Prizes for the most fish are awarded in two categories, Open Boat, using a variety of techniques, trawling, rod or reel, and any size of outrigger. The "Crillio" category encourages the continued practice of using the traditional small island skiff and hand fishing with line.

1st place winner in the Open Boat category was Gabriela, captained by Victor Carolina, with a catch of 109 kg of fish; 2nd place went to Captain Leo Briesen and the crew of Tonino with 95 kg of fish, including the largest catch of the day, a 13.5 kg Grouper, called Djampao on Aruba, another category for which they also won. 3rd place was taken by Jacintho Kelly and the Linda with 92 kg of fish.

Aruban Hospital readying for expansion and renovation program

On Monday, Minister Richard Visser, Minister of Public Health signed an agreement with the SOGA for the expansion and renovation of Aruba's hospital. The Minister is cognizant of the fact that the Aruban community is demanding more and better medical care, better health service and more hospital facilities. The issue of the expansion of the Hospital dates back to many, many years and was the subject of numerous meetings and discussions and investigations. However, nothing concrete was ever decided as to whether to expand or build a new hospital.

After much work on his part, Visser was able to revise the existing plans and incorporate his vision into these and formalize a concrete direction for the hospital and secure the necessary financing to renovate and expand the hospital.

On Monday an MOU was signed, an agreement in principle with Stichting On-roerend Goed Aruba (SOGA), to explore their financing, construction and maintenance of the expansion of the hospital. The project is expected to cost around Afls.150 million Florins.

Minister Visser is convinced that the expansion of the hospital will enable especially the Emergency Service (Eerste Hulp) to operate more efficiently and provide better service to many more patients simultaneously. He remarked that his vision is to place more emphasis and attention on the Emergency Service to ensure that our patients receive the kind of attention and care they need when they arrive there.

Soon the minister intends to announce his plans regarding IMSAN. He intends to do whatever is necessary to improve the level of care and service and to offer the community of San Nicolaas what they deserve at this institution. Visser is contemplating incorporating the services of a renowned international medical institution that would raise the level of care in Aruba and also attract medical tourism for Aruba.

International Criminal Court issues arrest warrants for Kadhafi

THE HAGUE, The Netherlands (AFP) – Judges at the International Criminal Court issued an arrest warrant for Libyan leader Moamer Kadhafi for war crimes and crimes against humanity on Monday, the 100th day of a NATO bombing campaign.

The White House hailed the move, describing it as "another indication" Kadhafi had lost his legitimacy.

Britain, another leading member of the UN-mandated international effort to protect civilians from Kadhafi's forces, hailed the court's decision and said members of the Libyan regime should now abandon him.

"Individuals throughout the regime should abandon Kadhafi," Foreign Secretary William Hague said.

Italy said the decision of the three-judge court, set up in 2002 to try war crimes, confirmed that Kadhafi had lost all "moral legitimacy" and could have "no role in the future of his country".

French Foreign Minister Alain Juppe said the warrant "confirms that the question is not whether Kadhafi should leave power, but when he will leave power."

ICC chief prosecutor Luis

Moreno-Ocampo had sought the warrants for Kadhafi, 69, his son Seif al-Islam, 39, and the head of Libyan intelligence, Abdullah al-Senussi, 62, for murder and persecution since mid-February, when the bloody uprising started.

All three are charged over their roles in suppressing the revolt, in which civilians were murdered and persecuted by Libyan forces, particularly in Tripoli, Benghazi and Misrata, the prosecutor said.

Thousands have so far died in the fighting, while around 650,000 others fled the country. Another 243,000 Libyans have been displaced internally, according to UN figures.

Moreno-Ocampo said on week-end that the war crimes in Libya will not stop until Kadhafi is arrested

Georgia court suspends anti-immigration law

ATLANTA, Georgia (AFP) – A federal judge has blocked an immigration bill in the southern US state of Georgia which would have allowed law enforcement officials to verify the migratory status of suspects stopped even for a minor traffic offense.

US District Judge Thomas Thrash's 45-page ruling Monday determined that the controversial measure was too draconian and could not be not be applied "equitably" throughout the state -- even it managed to "prevent some unauthorized aliens from obtaining state benefits."

The law, adopted by the Georgia state legislature in April, would have gone into effect on July 1. It was challenged by Latino groups in the state.

Thrash's decision also suspended a provision in the bill that would have punished people who knowingly transport or harbor illegal immigrants.

The judge wrote in this finding that "state and local law enforcement officers and officials have no authorization to arrest, detain or prosecute" based on the provision, as long as his injunction is in effect.

The law decision was a victory for Georgia's rapidly growing Hispanic community, which had feared police would arrest and indefinitely detain those without proper immigration papers.

The law has been controversial here in recent weeks because farmers in the state, who rely on undocumented workers from neighboring Mexico and elsewhere in Latin America, insist the law is scaring away workers and there is a shortage of help to pick crops.

Hispanic leaders also feared that undocumented parents would be separated from children, who, if born in the United States, would be legal citizens.

UN orders peacekeeping force to Sudan border region

UNITED NATIONS (AFP) – The UN Security Council on Monday ordered a 4,200-strong Ethiopian peacekeeping force to the disputed Sudanese territory of Abyei in a bid to douse tensions ahead of southern Sudan's split from the north.

The 15-member council voted unanimously for a resolution sending the force to monitor the withdrawal of north Sudan troops who occupied Abyei on May 21. More than 100,000 people have fled.

With fighting also flaring in the neighboring state of South Kordofan, north-south rivalry is again an international concern ahead of southern Sudan's declaration of independence on July 9.

Ethiopia has signaled that the force will be ready to be deployed before the key independence day celebrations in the south, diplomats said.

Abyei, which sits on the border, is claimed by both sides. An African Union-brokered peace accord to demilitarize the territory was reached on June 20 in the Ethiopian capital.

Abyei is now in "utter devastation" according to UN Deputy High Commissioner for Human Rights Kyung-wha Kang, who has just been to the territory. Speaking to reporters in Khartoum, she called for a thorough human rights investigation there and in South Kordofan.

Sudan's UN ambassador Daffa-Alla Elhag Ali Osman said Khartoum's forces would withdraw as soon as Ethiopian troops had been deployed.

French UN ambassador Gerard Araud said there was a "robust" mandate for the UN Interim Security Force for Abyei, or UNISFA. He highlighted that human rights abuse investigations would be allowed.

Dutch hit by new E.coli seed sprouts scare

THE HAGUE, The Netherlands -- Health Minister Edith Schippers is advising Dutch consumers not to eat raw rocket (arugula), mustard or fenugreek seed sprouts for the time being.

The French government has ordered the withdrawal of the sprouts from sale after people in the Bordeaux vicinity were infected with the rare E.coli O104:H4 bacterium. Some of those affected have developed the acute HUS kidney disorder.

The bacterium is the same type that was responsible for the recent E.coli outbreaks in Germany. The French authorities say it's probable that the seeds used for the sprouts were infected and caused the present outbreak.

The Dutch Food and Commodities Authority (nVWA) is investigating whether batches of the seeds in question have been transported to the Netherlands. Dutch consumers are being warned not to sprout these sorts of seeds themselves.

The dangerous E.coli bacterium has so far not surfaced in the Netherlands.

Mandela's wisdom, in his own words, in new book

The Nelson Mandela Foundation yesterday launched a new book that distills his wisdom into 2,000 quotes on everything from prison life to reconciliation to his grief over the ravages of AIDS.

The foundation said the project was born from the thousands of requests received every year from people and organisations across the globe seeking to verify statements attributed to Mandela, both celebrated and obscure.

Editors Sello Hatang and Sam Venter scoured public speeches as well as private papers, correspondence and audio recordings made over 60 years to ensure the veracity of every statement in "Nelson Mandela by Himself: The Authorised Book of Quotations".

"I see this as a reference work. I'm hoping that people will walk away knowing more about the man Nelson Mandela was," Hatang told AFP.

That is a daunting task for a man lionised as leader of the liberation struggle against white-minority rule, who won the Nobel Peace Prize and became South Africa's first black president.

The quotes are grouped into more than 300 alphabetised categories, from "Accountability" to "Zionism", including more personal themes like "Mother" and "Childhood".

"Few things make the life of a parent more rewarding and sweet as successful children," he wrote in a letter from Robben Island prison in 1981.

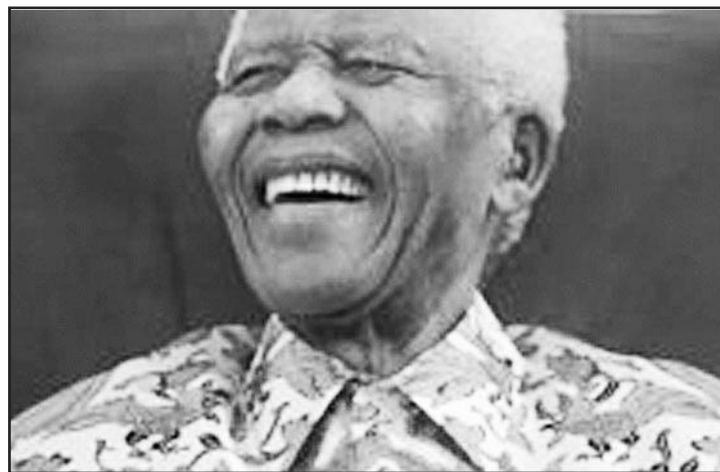

Some quotes reveal his thoughts on leadership.

"It is absolutely necessary at times for the leader to take an independent action without consulting anybody and to present what he has done to the organisation," he said in a 1993 conversation.

"A common touch is of an immense advantage, especially on the part of a head of state," said the man revered as one of the world's greatest statesmen.

Other quotes were culled from the manuscript of a never-completed sequel to his autobiography "Long Walk to Freedom".

"My comrades in prison were men of honesty and principle," he wrote, remembering his 27 years of incarceration.

Many are from his public pronouncements, which guided South Africa during its democratic transition since Mandela became president in the first all-race elections in 1994.

"Reconciliation means working together to correct the legacy of past injustice," he said in 1995.

Mandela turns 93 on July 18, and concerns about his health have mounted since his brief hospitalisation in January for an acute respiratory infection.

He was photographed last week reading from a copy of the book given to US First Lady Michelle Obama during her visit.

Venter said Mandela was given a copy of the book on the eve of the launch.

"We are hoping when he gets a chance to read it, he will be blown away," Hatang said.

Dutch Princes' Children's Book now in Papiamentu

She is known for her constant efforts to work for a better life for children.

She has given much time and energy to combating analphabetism through promoting reading programs. Thus, HerHRoyal highness, the Princess of the Netherlands, Laurentien is a staunch supporter of children's programs.

Minister Michelle Winklaar-Hooyboer was privileged to encounter the royal Princess during her recent visit to the Netherlands where she presented information regarding possible opportunities for Aruba and to present a copy Laurentien's book translated into Papiamentu. Ever since her period of study in the USA, Princess Laurentien began working on a project of writing books for children. Princess Laurentien never dreamed that she would one day become an author of children's books. In her daily activities in the Netherlands she occupies herself with sharing information concerning the Green Economy, the banking industry, etc. Now through her children's books she is able to share with others from the depth of her heart.

The Aruban Minister shared with Princess Laurentien Aruba's efforts to promote reading.

Winklaar-Hooyboer indicated to the Dutch royal princess that Aruba does not have analphabetism, although the level of interest in reading is considerably low. She explained something of the different projects on Aruba such as Charuba, the "Bon Nochi Drumi Dushi Foundation" and the Fundacion Papiamentu, all geared towards promoting reading among our children.

Reflections:

Looking back at AIFF II: reaping the rewards of the event

"I am a glutton for cinema," declared Caribbean Spotlight Series jurist Emmanuel Itier when asked why he returned to the Aruba International Film Festival for a second year; filmmakers who are also major film journalists such as Emmanuel are also evidence of how secondary goals of the festival are beginning to bare fruit—more about this in a bit.

Emmanuel has the stature of his own page on Wikipedia and IMDB. He sits on the board of directors of the Santa Barbara Film Festival and was a guest speaker at the Turks & Caicos International Film Festival and a jurist in Bermuda. He writes for www.AlloCine.fr and www.Buzzine.com and while attending the AIFF did TV interviews for the HBO-like French TV network Orange Cinema Series. While examining the goals of the Caribbean Spotlight Series (CSS) competition, he did take note that to his knowledge, no other regional film festival has taken this step to nurture local filmmakers and generate interest among native islanders.

"I notice the other film festivals pretty much stayed 'international;" this is a very good initiative and worth developing," he comments. "It could perhaps advance Jonathan's (Vieira, co-producer of the AIFF) dream of seeing a film institute established here in Aruba, like Sundance, and make it a center for the industry in the Caribbean. This could prove very interesting logistically, as Miami is only 2 hours away by plane, and for filmmakers from Latin America, even less. Cinema offers an opportunity to educate and elevate people, and I firmly believe the AIFF is trying to do that—also to promote tolerance; the CSS entries are certainly evidence of that."

This year, the fledgling competition featured films in keeping with peace and tolerance, which the judges felt a very noteworthy addition, particularly on Aruba "This is a place that really seems to be an island where so many people are integrated in tolerance and peace—this is something of an agenda, but I humane, peaceful agenda, not some of the heavy political propaganda I may have witnessed at some others. This is a good crossroad to do that sort of thing," observed Emmanuel.

CSS Director Aaron Hose, an Aruban filmmaker living in Florida, had narrowed down the field for the competition to five feature length films; four documentaries from Cuba, Puerto Rico, Montserrat/England and Jamaica and one narrative drama from The Bahamas, which won the Popular Choice Award. "Since I was 15, I was skipping school to go see movies, I am a cinema junkie," admits Emmanuel, "that is the good side of being a festival judge. The bad side is, as a filmmaker, I am very respectful of the process, and how tough it is to make a film, even one considered a bad one, and I really hate to judge my peers; I understand their passion and the process."

Emmanuel screened his last directorial project, "The Invocation," narrated by Sharon Stone, featuring interviews with Deepak Chopra, Desmond Tutu, Oliver Stone, The Dalai Lama, and quite a few noted personalities, which is a "call for world peace." He is now engaged in a project called "FEMME: Women

Emmanuel Itier

Healing the World" featuring Nobel Prize-winning women and other dynamic personalities who are effecting change. He is returning to Aruba in September/October to interview a number of women who impressed him greatly while he was here, including the Minister of Social & Economic Affairs and Culture, Michelle Hoooyboer-Winklaar, to be featured in his film. This is only one example of the ripples from the AIFF that are not immediately obvious; from the response of attending filmmakers and international media, we can expect to see more surface in the future.

Tomorrow—Aaron Hosé—his vision for the Caribbean Spotlight Series, and his wish to see more Aruban participation in the competition.

Dutch Princes' Children's...

The "Mr. Finney" project (title of Laurentien's interesting book) has to do with the new concept of promoting sustainable learning, that is teaching children to understand themselves and "sustainable reading." The concept behind the book, according to the princess is to present all forms of "green" thinking and to inculcate all forms of sustainable ideas.

Princess Laurentien is president of the European Commission for promoting reading which is working diligently to raise the level of reading in European countries. Children in Holland were extremely happy with the two publications of "Mr. Finney." It is expected that within a matter of weeks the translation to Papiamentu will be completed and children in Aruba will also have this interesting book here in their own language.

This means that Aruba too will, at that time, become familiar with sustainable reading, the new structure for reading and talking about a topic that is part of our daily lives.

Minister of Tourism meets US university professor

General Director of the Biscayne Campus of Florida International University hospitality school recently met with Minister of Tourism, Otmar Oduber. Professor Steven Moll happens to be a former professor of the Minister who himself is a graduate of Florida International University (FIU). Moll is here in order to familiarize himself with the Hospitality sector of the EPI School here. He was instrumental in the formation of the Bushiri Hotel School some 29 years ago. Steven Moll is exploring ways for a closer working together with Aruba's EPI hospitality sector. The intention is to explore the possibility for Aruban students to obtain a special tuition tariff, something similar to what is currently available at the University of Central Florida. They also discussed the potential for the creation of a type of institution that can carry the signature of FIU here in Aruba that could extend to Caribbean and Latin American students.

Oduber intimated that he will encourage Aruban students to continue enrolling in our own University of Aruba, but in the event our students are interested in studying abroad this should be done via a type of scholarship. At the moment that they could come up with something concrete this will be forwarded to his colleague in charge of education, Minister Arthur Dowers.

Oduber, a former student of FIU, today Minister of Tourism, Transport and Labor, used the opportunity to converse with Professor Moll about other students who also studied during his period at FIU and who now also hold significant positions of leadership in our community.

Top US court zaps violent videogame sales ban

The video game box for Call of Duty: Black Ops is seen at Play n Trade video game store

WASHINGTON (AFP) — The US Supreme Court ruled Monday that a California law banning the sale or rental of violent videogames to minors was unconstitutional and a violation of free speech protections.

The top US court, in a 7-2 ruling, upheld a lower court judgment that struck down a 2005 California law that made retailers subject to fines of $1,000 for selling or renting videogames labeled as violent to anyone under the age of 18.

"Like the protected books, plays, and movies that preceded them, videogames communicate ideas -- and even social messages -- through many familiar literary devices," said Justice Antonin Scalia, author of the majority opinion.

"That suffices to confer

First Amendment protection" to videogames under the US Constitution, Scalia said.

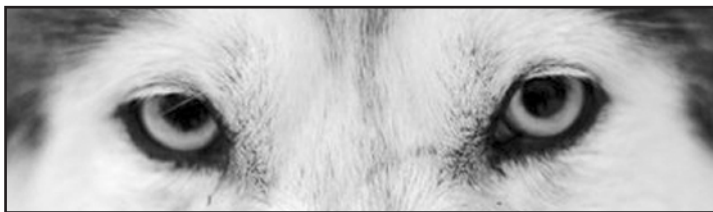

The California state law banning videogame sales to minors was overturned by a lower court in 2007 as infringing on free speech.

That ruling was upheld by a higher court in 2009. Then California governor Arnold Schwarzenegger appealed the case to the Supreme Court.

The law defines a violent videogame as one that depicts "killing, maiming, dismembering, or sexually assaulting an image of a human being," though it does not prevent a parent or guardian from purchasing a game for their child.

Opponents of the law argued that it restricted freedom of expression and was unnecessary because the Entertainment Software Rating Board rates thousands of games a year as to age appropriateness, providing parents with the ability to determine if a game is right for their child.

Hong Kong scientists make vision 'breakthrough'

HONG KONG (AFP) — Scientists in Hong Kong said Monday they had made a "breakthrough" discovery in how animals see and react to changing light conditions, which could ultimately help fight a range of human diseases.

The Hong Kong University of Science and Technology team studied fruit flies' vision and discovered that a protein known as INAD acts as a regulator to help animals cope with a switch from dim-light to bright sunshine.

"Scientists have been working for decades in their attempts to tease out the...mechanisms of animal visual systems, such as how they detect light under varying conditions ranging from dark nights to days with bright sunlight," the university said in a statement.

Although scientists were aware of the INAD protein, its role in regulating vision was previously unknown, according to the researchers, whose study was published in the latest edition of prestigious US scientific journal Cell.

Defects in the visual regulator can be "disastrous", researchers said.

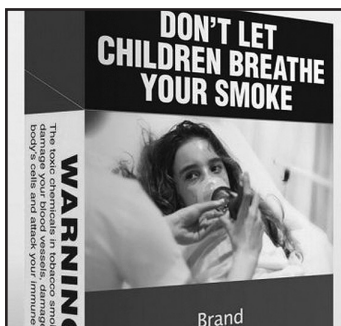

"It would mean disaster if it takes up to a few seconds or longer rather than a fraction of a second for a person to respond to an approaching car on the road, or for a fly to react to a flyswatter," said Professor Mingjie Zhang, who led the study.

The discovery could help scientists battle common eye conditions such as night blindness, he said.

But the oxidation process by which the INAD protein regulates light could also help scientists to better understand a range of other diseases, including AIDS and cancer, he added.

Tobacco giant to challenge plain packaging laws

SYDNEY, Australia (AFP) — Global tobacco giant Philip Morris will launch legal action over Australia's plan to introduce plain cigarette packaging, it said Monday, warning the damages bill could run to billions of dollars.

Under proposed government legislation aimed at reducing smoking rates, due to take effect next year, all logos would be removed from cigarette packaging in Australia, with company brand names printed in a specific font.

Packets would also be a bland olive-green and contain graphic health warnings such as black, diseased gums, blinded eyes and children in hospital.

The proposal, which is being closely watched by other countries considering similar policies, has enraged the tobacco giants, who say it would reduce their profits and see counterfeit products flood the market.

Hong Kong-based Philip Morris Asia (PMA), which distributes brands such as Marlboro in Australia, will argue that Canberra is breaching a bilateral investment treaty between the two countries.

The notice of claim, which was served on Monday, starts a three-month negotiation period and if no resolution is reached the matter will proceed to arbitration.

Canberra says 15,000 Australians die of smoking-related diseases every year, and that tobacco use costs the country Aus$31.5 billion ($33 billion) annually in healthcare and lost productivity.

Though Australia would be the first country in the world to mandate plain packaging, New Zealand, Canada and Britain have considered a similar approach, and Prime Minister Julia Gillard said the government would not be swayed.

Health Tip: Why You Have Gallstones

-- Gallstones are deposits that develop in the gallbladder from sources such as excess bilirubin or cholesterol.

The U.S. National Library of Medicine says there's no surefire way to prevent gallstones, and that they're more likely to develop among women, Native Americans, other ethnic groups and people older than 40.

The agency mentions these additional risk factors for gallstones:

- *Having a family history of gallstones.
- *Having issues with the gallbladder, which are more common during pregnancy.
- *Producing too much bilirubin, a bile pigment that's created when older or damaged red blood cells are broken down by the body.

- *Having an infection of the biliary tract or cirrhosis of the liver.
- *Being diabetic.
- *Having had an organ or bone marrow transplant.
- *Losing weight very quickly by consuming very few calories.
- *Receiving intravenous feedings for a long period.

Weddings on the beach are not uncommon here in Aruba, but Sunday evening, June 26, witnessed a very special ceremony, as the well-liked co-owner of Buster's Garage, Sports Bar and Grill in South Beach Center, Russell Vaughn Schultz, better known to all and sundry as Rusty, teamed up with his lovely inamorata, Judy, accompanied by the cheering of their many fans in the bleachers.

As the sun dipped below the horizon, the couple exchanged vows and riGngs in a ceremony performed by Minister Gregory Leyden; typical of this admired couple, it was marked with much humor and heartfelt laughter. Aside from being a host at one of the most

A poignant moment before the ceremony began was dedicated to lighting candles for parents who had passed on and could not share this special moment of finding happiness on the island Rusty and Judy have made their home.

Anti-trust czar opposes Air Canada-United pact

OTTAWA, Canada (AFP) - Canada's competition chief sought Monday to block a joint venture between Air Canada and United Continental, saying it creates a monopoly on key Canada-US routes that will lead to skyrocketing air fares.

"The proposed joint venture would allow Air Canada and United Continental to operate and set prices as one airline," said Commissioner of Competition Melanie Aitken in a statement.

The two airlines hold an estimated 55 percent share of trips from Canada to the United States.

Their plan to coordinate schedules, sales and pricing amounts to a merger that would give them a monopoly on 10 transborder routes, including Calgary-Houston, Montreal-Washington, Ottawa-New York and Toronto-San Francisco, Aitken said.

As well, it would "substantially reduce competition" on nine other routes such as Vancouver-Los Angeles, she said, after filing an application with Canada's competition tribunal to stop the deal.

Aitken went on to say that existing agreements between Montreal-based Air Canada and Chicago's United, which merged last year with Continental, "already allow the companies to set prices above competitive levels on all key 19 transborder routes, which alone violates the (anti-trust) act." "Making matters worse, they now want to fully merge their operations."

Air Canada said in a statement it "strongly disagrees" with the commissioner's assessment.

Their integration was granted immunity in 2009 from US antitrust laws, the airline noted, on the basis that it benefited consumers.

However, it added, "pending further developments relating to the outcome of the commissioner's application, Air Canada and United Continental Holdings have agreed to suspend the proposed transborder joint venture."

New York oil price falls further

NEW YORK, June 27, 2011 (AFP) - New York oil prices fell further on Monday, while London Brent surged amid easing supplies and fears of a default by debt-ridden Greece which could hit demand for energy.

New York's main contract, West Texas Intermediate (WTI) light, sweet crude for delivery in August, dropped 55 cents to close at $90.61 a barrel.

WTI has fallen around eight percent in the past two weeks, and was hit hard last week when the International Energy Agency decided to tap strategic oil stocks in a bid to rein in high-flying energy prices.

In London, Brent North Sea crude for August delivery gained 88 cents to close at $105.99 a barrel on the IntercontinentalExchange, regaining some ground after it shed about nine dollars on Thursday and Friday.

Analysts said the markets were still reeling from the IEA's surprise move to release 60 million barrels over the course of a month, half of which will come from the United States' strategic petroleum reserve (SPR).

The IEA, which represents 28 oil-importing countries, authorized last week's drawdown to make up for lost output from Libya, where a mass uprising against leader Moamer Kadhafi has practically halted oil production.

Also clouding the US market was new data showing that American consumers have tightened spending.

US top court upholds $270 million award to smokers

WASHINGTON, (AFP) - The US Supreme Court rejected an appeal request made by American tobacco companies on Monday in a class-action lawsuit that awarded 500,000 smokers a total of $270 million in damages.

Without comment, the highest US court dismissed the appeal of a 2009 Louisiana court decision that ruled the tobacco companies must pay hundreds of millions for programs to help the smokers quit.

The tobacco companies contested the lawsuit and argued that the class-action lawsuit brought together a number of disparate and individual complaints that spanned more than 50 years.

They said that by allowing the class-action suit, the companies were deprived of their right to investigate the individual plaintiffs and they could not all prove that they had suffered harm.

Lagarde gets China nod ahead of IMF decision

WASHINGTON (AFP) - France's Christine Lagarde picked up an endorsement from China Monday, raising her chances to become head of the International Monetary Fund despite grumbles from some nations over Europe's lock on the job.

The global crisis lender's executive board was expected to make the decision between Lagarde, France's finance minister, and Mexican central bank chief Agustín Carstens as early as today.

Since the race began in late May, 55-year-old Lagarde, put forward by Europe, has been the strong favorite, even though Washington, the IMF's key power, had not yet signaled its choice.

China's apparent confirmation of its backing for Lagarde showed that objections expressed by emerging economies to yet another European Fund executive director would probably have little effect on the final decision.

Speaking in London, China's central bank chief Zhou Xiaochuan said Beijing had already expressed "quite full support" for Lagarde's candidacy, according to Dow Jones Newswires.

Nevertheless, Carstens, 53, picked up endorsements from Australia and Canada on Friday, suggesting that the fight was not yet a "done deal," as Lagarde's backers have claimed since the outset.

Lagarde rejected any conflict of interest last week in her presentation to the IMF board. First, critics say she will be too biased toward Europe's bailouts of Greece, Ireland and Portugal when the IMF needs to be tougher.

She also remains subject of a legal investigation over alleged abuse of power in France, an issue that raised concerns by some IMF officials, though she has said the probe will find nothing.

Linda's Pancakes and Pizza place, delicious meals for breakfast, lunch and dinner

Olgita, Ilhan and Iyanla enjoying a scrumptious meal

The famous Saté

Linda's Pancake and Pizza place, located at Palm Beach 6D, Noord (on the right side of Valero gas station) offers patrons the most delicious Dutch pancakes and pizza's with a Dutch twist. Open from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., and only five minutes away from the high-rise resorts, Linda's is the perfect eatery for the whole family.

Seeing the popularity of this quaint small eatery, THE MORNING NEWS decided it was time to find out just how good Linda's really is, by sending out a team of taste testers.

Olgita, joined by her two kids ordered a little of everything while the kids roamed around freely, enjoying the afternoon.

The meal started out with Linda's original plain – to die for – Dutch pancakes, followed by pizza, where instead of using mozzarella Linda has created a unique twist to the traditional Italian dish by using Dutch Gouda cheese.

Adding a local favorite which could not stay off the table they also sampled the delicious saté (chicken, pork or beef on a wooden skewer) with peanut sauce (Indonesian influence on local food). For the finish the team (adults only) had one cup of Linda's delicious Espresso.

The team had this to say: "Superb! There are no words to describe just how delicious the pancakes are and the pizza is just mmm... good. The saté... out of this world!"

Besides the original plain pancake, Linda's specialty is pancakes with walnuts, Brie and honey; pancakes with banana and mango or a Dutch favorite: pancake with apple and bacon.

All their pizzas are made with Dutch Gouda cheese and different toppings making it richer in taste.

When it comes to saté, one has to say that the secret is in the sauce. If you want a specially prepared pancake or pizza, Linda is right there -- just for you -- in her kitchen.

"For those who are allergic to gluten I have a special pancake mix, gluten free," Linda stated to THE MORNING NEWS team.

Linda's Pancakes and Pizza also offers fried eggs and homemade soups.

"We also serve American coffee," Linda concluded.

With a complete menu, filled with delicious pancakes, pizzas and more, Linda's pancake and Pizza place is the perfect casual restaurant for all in the family.

Jackson 'Thriller' jacket sells for $1.8 million

LOS ANGELES (AFP) – The red and black leather jacket worn by Michael Jackson in his "Thriller" video went under the hammer for $1.8 million, a day after the second anniversary of the pop icon's death.

The jacket, which fetched several times its estimate of between $200,000 and $400,000, has "Love Michael Jackson" written on the sleeve, and a dedication in the lining to his long-time costume designers, to whom he gave it.

The buyer was identified as Milton Verret, a commodities trader from Austin Texas, who plans to have the jacket tour and be displayed at children's hospitals around the globe to raise money for their children's charities.

The auctioneer described the jacket as "among the most recognizable and famous garments of the 20th century," saying it sparked a 1980s fashion craze when it was copied and sold to adoring Jackson fans worldwide.

"The black and red style of the jacket became so identifiable with Jackson's groundbreaking (video) that he continued to use jackets of the same design when performing the song 'Thriller' for the duration of his career," it said.

The jacket is one of two which Jackson used during the ghoulishly iconic video, the other being on display in the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in Cleveland, Ohio.

In the 14-minute video from 1983, a graveyard full of zombies come to life, and join Jackson in a morbidly spectacular dance routine which has become an icon of popular culture.

Jackson gave the jacket to his longtime costume designers Dennis Tompkins and Michael Bush, asking them to use it as a reference for subsequent concert versions of the "Thriller" jacket he would use during his career.

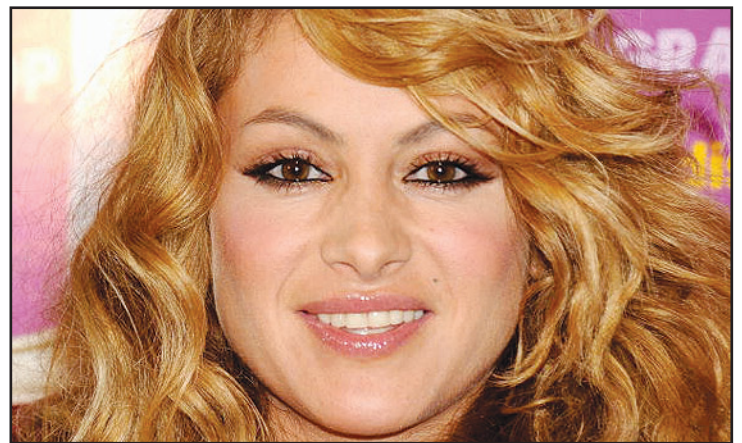

When he first brought it to them, the pair reportedly asked if he could really dance freely in the jacket, to which Jackson incredulously replied, "Have you seen the video for 'Thriller'?"

"Clearly, Jackson performed some of the most iconic choreography of our time in that video, without difficulty, while wearing the jacket," said the auctioneer.

Part of the proceeds from the sale will go to the Shambala Preserve in California, where Jackson's two Bengal tigers, Thriller and Sabu, have been living since 2006 when Jackson left the Neverland Ranch, it said.

On Saturday, fans paid their respects on the second anniversary of Jackson's death at the age of 50. He died while preparing for a comeback series of concerts in London.

Paulina Rubio Arrested in Miami After Car Accident

MIAMI, Fla.-- After a minor car crash police arrested Mexican Pop-singer Paulina Rubio, who allegedly refused to comply with police orders and got into an argument with an officer when he told her to get out from her car.

Miami Police ultimately let the Latin pop star go home and did not take her to jail on account that she had to breast-feed her 6-month-old child, police said.

Rubio was charged with disorderly conduct, obstruction of justice and refusal to obey a lawful command.

Her silver-colored BMW was stopped on a busy street and the officer asked her to come out and step on the sidewalk.

She refused, cursing at him in Spanish and frantically dialing someone on her cell phone, according to a police report.

The officer then told Rubio she was under arrest and pulled her out of the car and handcuffed her. The singer reportedly started screaming for help.

Copa America Argentina * July 1 - 24

The Copa - a century of latin rivalry

PARIS (AFP) - Spanning a century of keen rivalry, suffused by politics and history - the Copa America, which kicks off Friday in Argentina, is where the cultural and sporting twain meet, uniting a continent in one of its most enduring passions.

It used to be only the world's second oldest international football tournament - but after the 1980s demise of the old British Home Internationals it is the Copa, first held in 1916, which today can lay claim to that epithet.

While Latin America - (not just South, given a regular guest slot invite to Mexico) - remembers to offer an historic nod in the direction of the global game's British inventors, with many top clubs given English names, the Latin game was quick to carve itself a continental identity well before the first World Cup of 1930.

British railway workers introduced locals to the game in Argentina, where the first recorded game was held in 1867, prior to the creation of the Argentine Football Association in 1893.

By 1910, the round ball had become a fixture with sports fans and Argentina invited Chile and Uruguay to a tri-nations tournament to commemorate the May Revolution of 1810.

Although that event was not officially sanctioned, by 1916 it had morphed into the Campeonato Sudamericano de Selecciones (South American championship of national teams), crucially adding Brazil into the mix.

Given that Brazil are on a hat-trick of Copa crowns going into this year's edition, the Argentinians may reflect that might have been an invitation too many - but in reality they and Uruguay lead the honours board with 14 triumphs each to only eight for the 'auriverde'.

The 2011 Campeonato Sudamericano Copa América, better known as the 2011 Copa América or the Copa América Argentina 2011, will be the 43rd edition of the Copa América, the main international football tournament for national teams in South America. The competition is organized by CONMEBOL, South America's football governing body, and will be held in Argentina from July 1 to July 24, 2011. The draw for the tournament was held in La Plata on November 11, 2010. The defending champion is Brazil.

Brazil can, of course, comfort themselves with five World Cups to two for their Copa-collecting neighbours.

Uruguay, as would later happen with the World Cup in 1930, won the first edition at Argentina's expense and then repeated the dose the following year, this time on home soil, before Brazil got off the mark, also at home, in 1919.

Until the tournament was formally baptised the Copa America in time for the 1975 event, Argentina and Uruguay dominated the winners roster - a notable exception coming with minnows Bolivia triumphing in 1963 in their own landlocked country.

The early years of the Copa era followed that pattern, though Brazil did lift the trophy in 1989 after a 40-year gap, inspired by the predatory instincts of Bebeto - though it was Romario who hit the decider at a packed Maracana against Uruguay.

But the selecao, perhaps galvanised by a fourth World Cup in 1994, then turned to redressing the balance nearer home and Brazil have won four of the last five editions - Colombia interrupting the sequence in 2001.

The Copa has traditionally been a chance for the regional powerhouses to wean up-and-coming talents - Brazil are hoping that the likes of Santos' Neymar will set this edition alight, while Argentina will pray for some Barcelona-esque form from the peerless Lionel Messi.

Despite the kudos that winning the tournament can bring - and putting Argentinian noses out of joint in their rivals' backyard would be a sweet feeling for the Brazilians - coach Mano Menezes admits that the event is essentially a dress rehearsal for the 2014 World Cup, when the auriverde will welcome the world for the first time since 1950.

That extravaganza was all going to plan until Uruguay bagged a shock win in the final and the wound has not entirely closed, hence the need to look ahead.

Ecuadorians not happy

QUITO (AFP) - Ecuador are pleading with fans of the Andean country to be patient as they target a strong showing at the Copa America.

Fans have become a little restless after their weekend friendly loss to a youthful Mexico side while the latter's full squad concentrated on their Gold Cup final win over the United States.

Ecuador go up against holders Brazil, Paraguay and Venezuela in what appears a tough opening group and will be pinning many of their hopes of reaching the second round in Argentina on their Manchester United star Antonio Valencia.

They start their Group B campaign against the Paraguayans on July 3 but coach Reinaldo Rueda, a Colombian, is feeling the pressure after fans at the Olimpico Atahualpa stadium in Quito voiced disapproval of his side's final pre-Copa showing by whistling and chanting "ole" when the Mexicans had possession.

Some fans also chanted "Rueda out," even though he has only been in his post ten months.

The 54-year-old former Colombia and Honduras coach's record stands at two wins, seven draws and four defeats in that time but some fans would prefer to see Sixto Vizuete, an Ecuadorian in charge of the under20 side, step up to the senior job.

Ecuador have never managed better than fourth at the Copa, the world's oldest international tournament stretching back to 1916.

Dodgers file for bankruptcy

LOS ANGELES (AFP) - Major League Baseball's Los Angeles Dodgers filed for bankruptcy protection Monday in an effort to restructure its debt, court documents showed.

The petition was filed in Delaware by the Los Angeles Dodgers Holding Company under Chapter 11 of the US bankruptcy code.

It lists debts to current and former players including retired star Manny Ramirez, who owed more than $20 million.

The move comes as MLB officials had threatened to take over the team if owner Frank McCourt could not meet the Dodgers' payroll.

McCourt said in a statement that MLB Commissioner Bud Selig's refusal to approve a television deal with Fox was the cause for the Chapter 11 filing.

Selig has rejected a proposal under which Fox would have loaned about $200 million to Frank McCourt, who would use the Dodgers' cable television rights as collateral/

"We brought the commissioner a media rights deal that would have solved the cash flow challenge... Yet he's turned his back on the Dodgers, treated us differently, and forced us to the point we find ourselves in today," McCourt said.

"I simply cannot allow the commissioner to knowingly and intentionally be in a position to expose the Dodgers to financial risk any longer. It is my hope that the Chapter 11 process will create a fair and constructive environment to get done what we couldn't achieve with the commissioner directly."

The team plans to continue operations with $150 million in debtor-in-possession (DIP) financing.

"This financing will enable the Dodger organization to fully meet its obligations going forward. There will be no disruption," the statement said.

Williams sisters defiant as five-year reign ends

Serena (L), Venus

LONDON (AFP) - Serena and Venus Williams vowed to return stronger than ever Monday after their five-year reign at Wimbledon was brought to an abrupt end in the fourth round.

The all-conquering sisters -- practically invincible at Wimbledon since 2000 with a staggering nine titles between them -- were dumped out in the last 16 after suffering straight sets defeats.

Defending champion Serena was beaten 6-3, 7-6 (8/6) by French ninth seed Marion Bartoli while big sister Venus lost 6-2, 6-3 to Bulgarian Tsvetana Pironkova for the second year in a row.

"This was definitely not our best day. I think we both envisioned seeing this day going a little bit different," Venus admitted.

But the Williams sisters rejected suggestions that their double defeat marked the end of an era after a year in which they have both struggled with lengthy injury lay-offs and health problems.

Former world number one Serena, who had not played for nearly a year before returning in the warm-up event at Eastbourne earlier this month, insisted she still had the desire to return to the top.

"I made an effort to get out here and play a couple of tournaments. I just can't sit here and be disappointed. For the most part, I can just use this as momentum going forward," she said.

Venus, 31, who only returned earlier this month after five months out with a hip injury sustained at the Australian Open, is also confident she will improve by the time the North American hardcourt season climaxes at the US Open.

"I look forward to it. I got ready for this tournament so fast. You wouldn't even believe how quick that happened," she said.

"With more time, I think I can definitely play better, more matches. Obviously I would love to have peaked here. But, you know, I'm moving on."

Japan get off to winning start at World Cup

BOCHUM (AFP) - Japan got their women's World Cup campaign off to a winning start with a 2-1 victory over Group B rivals New Zealand here on Monday.

But the Japanese Nadeshiko were pushed hard by the New Zealand Ferns who had been looking to score their first point in their third appearance in a World Cup.

Yuki Nagasato and Aya Miyama scored for Japan with Amber Hearn heading in for New Zealand.

It was the second major international tournament where the two sides had met in the opening match after the 2008 Olympics where New Zealand held Japan 2-2.

The more experienced

Japanese got off to a confident start with Nagasato opening after just six minutes when she lobbed a Shinobu Ohno cross past Jenny Bindon in the New Zealand goal.

It was the 32nd goal in 64 international matches for the 23-year-old Nagasato who plays club football in the German league for Turbine Potsdam.

Japan, ranked fourth, have competed in every edition of the tournament since it began in 1991, and are favourites to advance in the group which also includes England and Mexico who play later in Wolfsburg.

New Zealand have never won a game at the World Cup.

Freak goal hands Mexicans draw with England

WOLFSBURG (AFP) - A freak long-range goal from Mexico forward Monica Ocampo saw the central Americans hold England to a 1-1 draw on Monday in their opening Group B match of the women's World Cup.

The Atlanta Beat winger was well outside the England penalty area when she hit a long-range first-half effort which curled up towards the cloudless sky before dropping down into the top left hand-corner of the England net.

"It's not something that I trained to do, it just came from the flow of the game. Thank god it went in and it put us back in the game," said Ocampo.

"It is special because it is a World Cup goal, I am really proud to have scored it."

Ocampo's effort in the 33rd minute was enough to share the points in Wolfsburg after England midfielder Fara Williams had earlier put the Three Lions ahead.

"No excuses, we have played better and we will have to play better if we want to stay in this tournament," said England coach Hope Powell.

Leonardo Cuellar's Mexico face Group B leaders Japan in Leverkusen on Friday while England take on New Zealand in Dresden the same day.
